Lucy has a specialist practice in financial services regulation and banking matters. She undertakes both contentious and non-contentious advisory work.

Lucy is an expert on the Consumer Credit Act and the mortgage and home finance regulatory regime. She has extensive experience advising on payment services, electronic money and the regulation of cryptoassets. Her work often involves advising off-shore and overseas banks and financial service providers on the UK regulatory perimeter.

Lucy also advises on the wider aspects of the financial services regulatory regime such as the FCA Consumer Duty, financial promotion issues, appointed representatives and intermediaries, asset and motor finance and retail banking issues, together with data protection and the UK GDPR as it relates to the banking and financial services sector.

She is particularly skilled at drafting user-friendly, 'plain English' customer – facing documentation for use in the financial services sector and advising on unfair contract terms in financial services documentation.
