If you have previously instructed me, you'll know that you can expect a no nonsense and committed approach.

The chances are however that you'll only be reading this if you don't already know me – so what can you expect?

I could provide you with a long list of all the complex, serious and high-profile cases I have been instructed in over many years. I'm not going to do that as I don't think it's of much use to anyone to be treated to my 'Greatest Hits' collection. Frankly, I find that kind of 'puffery' to be boring and embarrassing.

If you have not previously instructed me there is only one way of finding out whether I am up to the job...

(PS – If you're looking for Legal 500 / Chambers and Partners quotes please note that I have decided not to make any future submissions. That is not based on 'sour grapes'. Both Directories have included me in the past. I have significant reservations about their corrosive role in the profession and have decided to be true to my principles).

Expertise

Sports Law

Ray has considerable experience in Rugby Football Union (RFU) disciplinary work. He has represented top players and coaches at Premiership, European and International level and has appeared in many high profile cases.

He is well aware of the unique pressures faced by professional teams, and is both flexible and approachable. He understands the considerable time constraints that often apply in disciplinary work, and the need to react quickly and effectively in what is usually a fast moving and dynamic situation.

Ray is client focused, and will bring to bear his considerable experience as an advocate in the most serious of criminal cases.
