Recent instructions include:

- advising a deceased shareholder's multimillion-pound estate with respect to the operation of share transfer provisions in the company's constitution;
- advising directors with respect to the recovery of funds by the company in the directors' loan accounts;
- advising and representing clients in relation to applications for reinstatement of companies to the register.

As well as a number of articles and book chapters on shareholder remedies, Christopher is author of Watts PG, Campbell N & Hare, CVM, Company Law in New Zealand(2nd ed, Lexis Nexis NZ, 2016), is a contributor to Buckley on the Companies Acts (loose-leaf) and will be a co-author of the next edition of Gower's Principles of Company Law(Sweet & Maxwell, 2021). Christopher is the convenor of the Company Law group at the University of Oxford and teaches undergraduates and postgraduates on the Company Law and Corporate Finance Law courses.

INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY LAW

Christopher advises across the range of insolvency law areas, frequently advising officeholders on their potential claims against third parties such as directors and lenders. He appeared in the important case of Phillips (Liquidator of AJ Bekhor & Co) v Brewin Dolphin Bell Lawrie Ltd[2001] 1 WLR 143 dealing with transactions at an undervalue and more recently has received the following instructions:

- advising and representing individuals in relation to bankruptcy petitions;
- advising liquidators with respect to the recovery of funds appearing in the company's accounts as director loans;
- advising and representing national concern in dispute with HMRC over unpaid liabilities.

Christopher has also written articles and chapters covering liquidation and administration issues.

JURISDICTION, CHOICE OF LAW AND CONFLICT OF LAWS

Christopher has advised and represented clients in relation to a number of jurisdictional and choice of law matters, including:

- advising and representing client in relation to dispute concerning the operation of the contractual provisions of the Brussels Regulation;
- advising and representing client in relation to jurisdictional issues arising out of proceedings commenced against it in New York;
- advising an international bank on jurisdictional and choice of law issues arising out of the operations of its branch in England and Wales.

In addition, Christopher has written on issues relating to forum non conveniens and the choice of law issues relating to banking and trade finance transactions.

GENERAL COMMERCIAL LAW

As well as the more specialist areas above, Christopher has advised and represented clients in a broad range of general commercial disputes, with recent instructions including:

- advising and representing a local authority for breach of agreement for lease relating to a multimillion-pound agricultural facility;
- representing national telecommunications company in dispute over telecommunications contracts;
- advising and representing an English university with respect to recovery of its tuition fees;
- advising and representing regional firm in dispute over performance of a construction contract;
- advising and representing client in relation to enforcement action taken against a farm and its animals;
- advising national insurance company in relation to its liability under insurance policy for litigation concerning enforcement of easements and a boundary dispute;
- advising and representing clients with respect to the recovery of credit-hire charges.

As part of his academic work, Christopher teaches in the areas of Contract Law, Trusts Law, Tort Law and Commercial Law.
