POLICE GUIDANCE (NPCC & College of Policing 3/4/20) [Extracts]

... exceptional powers for exceptional circumstances only

If a constable has reasonable grounds to suspect a person is potentially infectious they may direct or remove that person to a place suitable for screening and assessment or keep the person at that place until a public health officer can undertake the screening and assessment. This should be the absolute exception.

Remember: Engage, Explain, Encourage, Enforce. Enforcement is your last option.

CV symptoms can be vague and it is important we do not turn to these powers in haste if we see someone with a cough or temperature.

All this activity should be pre-planned with medical practitioners

Our advice is to never act without the prior advice of Public Health, but the Act does make provision for you to do so of your own accord, therefore it is ultimately the decision of your chief constable how these provisions are to operate for you locally.
